Onslaught Reborn

Liefeld & Loeb's Second Onslaught

If you were pressed to name a Marvel concept ripe for revival, it's doubtful that Heroes Reborn—the short-lived revamp of core Marvel titles in the late 1990's—would be on your top ten list.

But Heroes Reborn made Jeph Loeb & Rob Liefeld's list—and Marvel agreed with them!

In November, Loeb and Liefeld will reunite for a five-part weekly miniseries that returns to the Heroes Reborn universe, bringing along the villain who got the whole Heroes Reborn ball rolling. But Heroes Reborn Reborn was a bit too cumbersome a title... so instead, they opted to spotlight the villain who caused it all. Welcome to Onslaught Reborn.

In case you've forgotten, Onslaught was the creature that came from... essentially, the union of Professor Xavier and Magneto's minds. Basically, a "seed" from Magneto's psyche took residence in Xavier's mind, ultimately giving form to Xavier's repressed anger and darker emotions. Hugely powerful, Onslaught threatened all of existence with its power, and, in order to stop it, the Avengers, the Fantastic Four, Iron Man, and Captain America sacrificed themselves, apparently destroying Onslaught.

But Marvel had ulterior motive. The Onslaught saga wasn't just a storyline—it was a method by which Fantastic Four, Iron Man, Captain America, and The Avengers could be relaunched under the direction of then-Image superstars Jim Lee and Rob Liefeld. For a year, these reinterpreted heroes operated outside of the Marvel Universe before their 1997 homecoming.

Marvel revisited the "Heroes Reborn" universe recently in Exiles, where it was one of many settings utilized in the "Worlds Tour" storyline. But that was nothing compared to the return that Loeb and Liefeld are delivering.

Marvel's successful return to Age of Apocalypse last year inspired the company to explore other franchises that were having anniversaries, Loeb said. "Dan Buckley brought up that Heroes Reborn was having the 10th anniversary and Dan—among others at Marvel—had been a fan. Say what you will, there are a lot of people who came to Cap and the FF because of Rob and Jim who had never read those books before.

"Dan saw a way to make a connection here between a project that I had been involved in ten years ago—combined with my friendship with Rob—to tie it into The Fund and create something special." The Fund is, of course, the Sam Loeb College Scholarship Fund, created by Jeph Loeb in memory of his son, who died just as he was beginning his own comics writing career. Last year's Superman/Batman 26 was the first book done to benefit the fund. "I've been looking for something that Marvel could do—not in response to DC—but in their own way," Loeb explained. "Suddenly, we were presented with a way to reach a wide audience and at the same time offer a huge contribution to the Fund.

"There are few people in the comic book business who were as close to Sam as Rob was —they just cracked each other up. People who don't know Rob don't know how funny he is—and his sense of humor is the core of our friendship. Ask anybody when I talk about him, it's always 'He makes me laugh,' which is the highest compliment I can pay someone."

With the concept in mind, Loeb pitched the idea to Liefeld. "I received a call following the Marvel summit last fall and the guys at Marvel asked if I was interested in participating in this," Liefeld explained. "They explained that Jeph was involved and laid out how it would combine Onslaught and Heroes Reborn and it sounded like a great opportunity, so I jumped at it. I was really jazzed that I could be involved. I was in the middle of getting a couple other Marvel projects up and running and they immediately went to the back burner so Onslaught Reborn could happen. I'm so excited about this and I've had to keep a lid on it for months."

While Liefeld is the primary artist on the project, he's not the only illustrator involved. ""As to it becoming a big all star jam," Loeb said, "let's just say we're talking about adding some seasoning to the pot that will make this even more fun and raise money for this cause that means the world to me. "

For Liefeld, re-teaming with Loeb—with whom he first worked on the original Heroes Reborn—was more than enough incentive to get rolling. "Jeph has great chemistry with everyone, especially artists," Liefeld said. "He plays to an artist's strengths and desires. He enjoys giving all his artists a big canvas top work from which is why he attracts such a diverse group of talents from Tim Sale, Joe Mad, Jeff Campbell, Mike Turner, Jim Lee, and Darwyn Cooke.

"Jeph also has great instincts as to what the readers will enjoy. Look at his run on Superman/Batman for an example of a him creating blockbuster arc after blockbuster arc despite his creative team. His writing is very entertaining, filled with character advancement and enough twists and turns to keep you glued to the page... He's diverse, but he always hits the mark."

Both creators agreed that Onslaught Reborn had to transcend the typical fifth-week event. After all, the original Heroes Reborn was a mega-event in its time. "As controversial as Heroes Reborn was—well, it was the biggest charge to that group of heroes until New Avengers came around," Loeb said. "And now, thanks to Mister Bendis, doing something like this becomes an even bigger event!...

"Being on Heroes Reborn changed my life. I couldn't have known it at the time, but it affected me years later as well. Here's just two of the things I can now do that are completely unrelated to Heroes Reborn, but couldn't have happened without Heroes Reborn or Rob. One, was the first of the 'outsourcing' deals and without that project I never could have done Superman/Batman #26 —nobody had ever let someone outside New York package a book. Today, DC believed in me and on #26 that they worked closely with me to put it all together.

"And two, I got to know Jim Lee very well at that time. There simply would not have been Batman: Hush without Rob picking me to write Captain America and The Avengers.

The starting point for Onslaught Reborn is House of M, oddly enough. "Scarlet Witch's infamous 'No more mutants' line from House of M sets everything in motion," Liefeld explained, "and from there it's not too long before Franklin Richards and the entire Fantastic Four are confronted by Onslaught...

"Franklin will inevitably be used to open up the doorway to the Heroes Reborn universe again—remember, he placed the heroes there in order to protect them from Onslaught in the first place! The Heroes Reborn characters will be confronted by Onslaught as his reach extends deep into their world and upsets the balance of both realities.

"All of the major Marvel heavy-hitters are present and accounted for, The FF, Thor, Hulk, Cap, The Avengers, Bucky, Namor, Loki, Enchantress... plus some new faces. Jeph broke the story down for me several months back and I was grinning ear to ear, it's big!..."

Don't dismiss this as an "out of continuity event. As editor John Barber explained, "This is taking place right now. Onslaught is awakened here and now. Really, Onslaught was left in a position at the end, where there was a door for a return or a... rebirth."

The series isn't actually set on the Heroes Reborn Earth, which currently orbits the sun exactly opposite the Marvel Universe earth and was, for a time, ruled by Dr. Doom. "There's some pretty complex continuity surrounding the Heroes Reborn world, which would make it a little difficult to bring in," Barber said. "As Onslaught gets involved, let's just say that there are other dimensions involved, and, as Franklin gets involved, more rifts in time and space. We're pulling things out of different places...it gets a little complex to explain without giving it away, but it's going to be a lot of fun.

The story, will feature an impressive array of Heroes Reborn stars. "With an event this big the challenge is to both service this enormous cast—the FF, the Hulk, Thor, and The Avengers including Iron Man and Cap—but at the same time keep it grounded on a personal level so there's an emotional in for the reader," Loeb said. "It all starts with Franklin, of course, but the book will have its own voice."

And as Liefeld explained, Onslaught Reborn allows the two creators to tackle some unfinished business. "Onslaught Reborn represents an opportunity to complete a job that was left unfinished storywise," Liefeld said. "Everything here is brand spankin' new. This is a sequel in every sense of the word. It's ten years later, Onslaught is angry and powerful and ready to exact revenge on everyone. Onslaught is a terrific villain, and he's been restrained for a very long time..."

As a lead-in for Onslaught Reborn, Marvel is repackaging the four Heroes Reborn series in trade paperbacks—and that's long overdue as far as Jeph Loeb is concerned. "C'mon—Jim Lee on the FF? Whilce Portacio doing Iron Man? Ian Churchill on Avengers? And—you can ask Mark Millar—there's more than a few tips of the hat to Heroes Reborn that went into the creation of the Ultimate Universe."

Onslaught Reborn #1, a $2.99 comic, is scheduled for November 29th release.

SONIC THE HEDGEHOG #169 11/29 Archie SEP063081 $2.25

by Ian Flynn, Tracy Yardley, & Jim Amash 'Order and Chaos: the Gathering Part 2 of 2' - A Sonic battle that has been building for ages comes to its penultimate chapter. With Sonic's father and closest allies in the Freedom Fighters out of commission, it's left to Super Sonic, Super Shadow, and Turbo Tails to help save the day. But how do you defeat an enemy so evil that they don't even have an identity? That mysterious enemy, simply known as 'Anonymous,' hopes the answer is 'you don't!' Plus: 'For a Friend': The Chaotix undertake a secret mission of revenge against Dr. Robotnik. But when the covert mission goes wrong can even the stealthy Espio make it out alive?

SONIC THE HEDGEHOG ARCHIVES VOL 1 TP 11/22 Archie SEP063083 $7.49

SONIC X #15 11/15 Archie SEP063085 $2.25

by Edkin, Wahnish, Austin, and Spaz 'Badd Eggnog': 'Tis the season for giving gifts and good will to allO or in Dr. Eggmans' case a perfect opportunity to crush the hopes and dreams of children everywhere, ruin Sonics' reputation, and steal gobs of the funny green stuff (money to you and I) all in time for the winter holidays. How could Eggman do this? With the help of Santa Claus of course! With a kooky Christmas cover by Spaz!
